

Matthew Moshiri

President, Verisk Maplecroft

Matthew Moshiri is president of Verisk Maplecroft, responsible for the company's overall strategic direction and business performance. Matt takes an active role in advising some of Verisk Maplecroft's largest customers on issues ranging from geopolitical trends to developing new analytical risk solutions.

Matt joined Verisk Maplecroft in 2016 and has served as chief commercial officer, responsible for all commercial-related activity, and as global head of consulting. In this role, he redesigned the company's advisory offering and capabilities to establish the company as a trusted advisor to some of the world's largest companies and organizations.

Before joining Verisk Maplecroft, Matt advised energy clients at Verisk business Wood Mackenzie on a range of commercial-related issues. Matt began his career with AES Corporation and PricewaterhouseCoopers in Caracas, Venezuela, where he focused on Latin American and Caribbean energy markets.

Matt holds an MME (master of energy management) from the BI Norwegian School of Business, through a joint program with the Institut Français du Pétrole (IFP) and the University of California Berkeley and a BA from the University of Colorado at Boulder.

Matt is a member of Chatham House, an independent policy institute focusing on understanding and adapting to significant global change, also known as the Royal Institute of International Affairs.
