Taking the guesswork out of estimating business contents

360Value® Commercial Contents

Many business owners today don’t have the time to inventory and price the equipment, furniture, and office supplies they need covered by insurance.

That leaves many insurers with two choices: First, they accept the stated value of the items from the busy insured, who may be giving little more than a rough guess. Or, they estimate the amount, using a percentage of the value of the structure that houses the business. Both of these approaches can result in over insurance or underinsurance, reducing customer satisfaction and profitability.

Data drives more accurate estimates
Seeking to remove some of the uncertainty and guesswork without adding legwork for insurers or business owners, Verisk introduced 360Value Commercial Contents to help calculate the value of a business’s personal property more effectively. Using data collected from business insurance policies and real-world claims, 360Value Commercial Contents employs proprietary computer models to generate a content coverage limit that’s based on verified information.

Minimal effort for maximal results
Entering just a business name and address, insurers can easily and swiftly access a Commercial Contents Replacement Cost Estimate that can help improve the accuracy of their underwriting without sacrificing the speed today’s commercial customers demand.
The 360Value difference
Like 360Value for Commercial Property, 360Value Commercial Contents leverages actual loss claims to generate a highly reliable replacement cost estimate reflecting localized, industry-specific pricing information.
