

Innovative loss history solutions

Enable more accurate underwriting and rating at the point of quote

Understanding claims history is critical to accurate initial quoting. Yet for cost-saving reasons, loss history data is often ordered just before bind. As a result, the quoted price can change before a policy is bound, affecting the customer experience. There's a better way. A-PLUS™ Auto loss history solutions deliver affordably priced options—and the insight you need at point of quote.

Loss history options to help you compete

Verisk maintains a robust loss history database—powered by insurer contributions—to deliver our A-PLUS loss history solutions. Reports on previous claims activity help you refine underwriting and rating.

A-PLUS reporting tools enable immediate decisions with information on multiple loss and coverage types. Full-detail reports are regulated by the Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA) and provide up to seven years of claims activity on risks.

The A-PLUS Claims Activity Profiler (CAP) enhances our A-PLUS suite. For a nominal fee, this innovative solution provides point-of-quote indicators of applicants' existing claims history. A-PLUS CAP helps optimize loss history costs by informing decisions on ordering full-detail reports—at the earliest point in the sales cycle.

Loss history expense vs. customer satisfaction

You no longer need to choose between ordering loss history at bind to save money and providing a great customer experience. The A-PLUS suite of innovative solutions can help inform underwriting and rating early in the quote flow.

Reasons to consider moving loss history review to point of quote

Ordering loss history information just before bind might seem like a sound money-saving idea. Although widely practiced in the industry, however, it's a strategy that in many cases leads to upcharges and potential hidden costs that can hurt your business. A-PLUS Auto loss history solutions can help.

Potential hidden costs to think about

Customer experience costs

As many as 60 percent of initial auto quotes are adjusted near point of bind.¹ Consumers often express their dissatisfaction on social media.²

"#X-InsuranceCo. Wow...quote a rate...then up the rate $30 per month." – Customer A

"Stay away from @X-Insurance-Co. They quote a price, take the money and want more a week later!" – Customer B

Sales efficiency and workflow costs

Adjusting quotes at bind can harm agent and prospect relationships and affect new sales, cross-selling, and renewals.³

"Customers consider a change during bind/issue as a type of bait and switch that reduces our bind rate and credibility with the client." – Agent A

"We are constantly tweaking things—which causes up-rates for customers and affects our ability to explain and retain." – Agent B

Missed opportunity costs

Ordering loss history only at bind limits an insurer's opportunity to optimize and leverage valuable data early in the sales cycle.
